THOS. P. FORTUNE PASSES TO REWARD

Veteran Druggist Relieved from Two Years' Suffering

The following more complete account of the death and funeral of the late T. P. Fortune, formerly of Hickman, but at the time of his death a prominent druggist of Memphis, is taken from the Memphis Commercial Appeal of last Thursday:

After an illness of nearly two years, Thomas Preston Fortune, aged 73, president of the Fortune-Ward Drug Company and a resident of Memphis for thirty years, was relieved of his sufferings yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock when his soul passed to its reward. Death occurred at the Methodist hospital, where he had been confined for the last sixty days, with all members of the family at his bedside.

Early in the day Mr. Fortune suffered a sinking spell and, thinking the end was near at that time, expressed his preparedness and willingness to die, and his eagerness to join his wife, the late Mary Landrum Fortune, who, a devoted Christian, as was her husband, preceded him in death twenty-seven years.

Mr. Fortune underwent an operation two years ago for stomach trouble, and since that time his health has gradually declined. A second operation about a year ago failed also, and he continued to grow worse. During the two years he visited Hot Springs, Ark., and Biloxi, Miss., several times in an effort to recover his health.

As one of the sturdiest and most influential citizens of Memphis, Mr. Fortune was also one of the most reserved. He shunned publicity of all kinds, and what he did for his fellow man, which amounted to a great deal, was done without flourish and clamor.

Born in Brownsville, Tenn., on Nov. 5, 1848, he received his education in the public schools there. Being without money upon reaching maturity, he went to Hickman, Ky., where he began working in a drug store. A few months later he went into business for himself. After ten years at this he moved to Memphis thirty-eight years ago and reopened his drug store in what is now the Gayoso hotel on South Main street.

He brought to Memphis with him his wife, Mrs. Mary Landrum Fortune of Hickman. Three sons blessed this union, two of whom still survive. Mrs. Fortune died in 1895, and, since her death her husband has many times declared his willingness to die to join her in heaven.

The Fortune-Ward Drug Company was formed about 1900, but Mr. Ward sold his interest to Mr. Fortune shortly afterward. Fortunes, Inc., was organized in July, 1920, by Harold Fortune, a son, and the elder Fortune was made a director.

Mr. Fortune was a member of the board of stewards of the First Methodist church and a Mason for twenty-five years. The two surviving boys are S. Preston and W. Harold Fortune, the third son, Leslie, having died in 1915. Preston is connected with the Central State National Bank, and Harold has been active manager of the Fortune-Ward Drug Co. and Fortunes, Inc., for several months. A sister, Mrs. Nora Faqua, of Hickman, also survives, the only other immediate relatives being Albert and Walter Taliaferro, nephews, members of a prominent Gadsden, Ala., family.

Funeral services will be conducted Thursday at 4 p. m. at the residence of his son, Harold, 94 North Belvedere, with Dr. T. W. Lewis and Dr. C. W. Webb, pastors of the Madison Heights and the First Methodist churches, officiating. Interment will follow in Elmwood.

Active pallbearers are, with one exception, men who have been associated in business with him, as follows: H. P. Davis, B. F. Boggan, LaValle Moore, Frederick Weiss, O. C. Pool, F. W. Ward, Jesse W. Wynne. Honorary pallbearers are John R. Pepper, Bollinb Shiley, W. G. Organ, Dr. A. R. Porter, P. S. Smithwick, R. T. Fant, J. C. Ottlinger, J. P. Jordan, F. M. Gilliland, H. Dent Minor and Dr. Casa Collier.

Blackstrap.

Blackstrap is a low-grade sugar cane molasses. At one time it was generally discarded in sugar refining but is now used not only as an appetizer and tonic for stock feeding, but is included as a regular ingredient of mixed rations, being a food of the carbohydrate class.

Gumzote is a new form of rubber sponge, three times lighter than cork, a non-conductor of heat and cold and impervious to water.

Expression Traced to Gaelic.
The expression "son of a gun" is quite common in South Wales. It is thought by some that the word "gun" is derived from the original Gaelic "gunna" (modern Welsh "gun"), meaning a bowl; if so, the expression "son of a gun" is a fragment of old Celtic mythology, the bowl or caldron in both Irish and Welsh mythology being the source of and origin of embryonic life.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Harriet Field, twenty-eight years old and beautiful, is the social secretary of the flirtatious Mrs. Isabelle Carter, at "Crownlands," Richard Carter's home, and governess of fifteen-year-old Nina Carter. Ward, twenty-four years old and irresponsible, fancies himself in love with his mother's attractive secretary, Mrs. Carter's latest "affair," is with young Anthony Pope, and the youth is taking it very seriously.

CHAPTER II.—Presiding over the tea-cups this summer afternoon, Harriet is profoundly disturbed by the arrival of a visitor, Royal Blondin. Next day, at a tea party in the city, Blondin makes himself agreeable to Nina and leaves a deep impression on the unsophisticated girl.

CHAPTER III.—Harriet's agitation over the appearance of Blondin at "Crownlands" is explained by the fact that he had been a disturbing element in her life ten years before, and she fears him. The man is an avowed adventurer, living on the gullibility of the idle rich. He frankly announces to Harriet his intention of marrying Nina, who, as the daughter of an aristocratic family, is a highly desirable "catch," and urges her to aid him. She is in a sense in his power, and at pleading with him to abandon his scheme agrees to follow a policy of neutrality.

CHAPTER IV.—Harriet visits her married sister, Linda Havenport, with whom she had had her home during her unfortunate acquaintance with Blondin, and tells her of his reappearance. The two women, realizing the unscrupulous nature of the man, view the future with apprehension.

CHAPTER V.—Knowing the tender feeling she has inspired in Ward Carter, Harriet is tempted to marry him for the position and wealth she can give him, though realizing she does not love him. Blondin has ingratiated himself with Madame Carter, Richard's mother, and she is wholeheartedly in favor of his marriage with Nina. Ward urges Harriet to marry him at once. She procrastitates.

CHAPTER VI.—Angered at his wife's too open flirtation with young Anthony Pope, Richard Carter markedly shows his resentment. Isabelle, ardently returning her youthful lover's attentions, elopes with him on his yacht, and pursuit is useless. The news of the sensational affair, exaggerated, of course, by gossip, is kept as much as possible from being public property.

CHAPTER VII.—Ward Carter again urges Harriet to marry him, but she cannot bring herself to do so, and with him merely for the sake of self-advancement, and refuses. The fact of Mrs. Carter's elopement becomes public. Harriet's capable managing hand is more than ever needed at "Crownlands," and despite the complication she foresees as inevitable she decides to remain.

CHAPTER VIII.—Blondin puts pressure on Harriet to forward his marriage with Nina, but she makes up her mind to defy him. Richard Carter questions her concerning her knowledge of Blondin's intentions, and she counsels active opposition to the match. The matter, which Harriet moves to a summer establishment on Long Island.

CHAPTER IX.—In the new home Harriet, with Madame Carter and Nina, settles down for a vacation. In a frank talk with Nina Harriet endeavors to show her Blondin's unworthiness, but it has little effect on the infatuated girl. On Richard Carter's insistence, Harriet is installed as mistress of the household, but finding her position untenable, declares her intention of leaving. Richard makes an offer of marriage, as a way out of the situation, but Harriet, considering such a thing impossible while Mrs. Carter (though divorced) is still alive, refuses, and leaves the house. To her old-fashioned ideas, the fact that Richard Carter has been granted a divorce from his erring wife does not free him from his marital ties, and marriage with him is impossible.

CHAPTER X.—At her sister's home Harriet helps to bring her small nephew safely through an attack of diphtheria. Linda cordially approves Harriet's stand on the question of marriage with a divorced man. David Davidson, Linda's brother-in-law, warmly presses his suit, and Harriet has about made up her mind to accept him when Richard Carter appears with the announcement that Isabelle is dead and no obstacle to his marriage with Harriet remains. The girl yields, and the marriage is quietly solemnized. Harriet offers to tell Richard the circumstances of her entanglement with Blondin, but he refuses to listen.

CHAPTER XI.—The news of their mother's death, shocking to Ward and Nina, is softened by Harriet's comforting. The three take a trip to Bermuda, and on their return Richard Carter realizes that he is deeply in love with Harriet, though their marriage has simply been one of convenience.

CHAPTER XII.—Formal announcement of the wedding is made, and Madame Carter somewhat grudgingly welcomes her new daughter-in-law. Harriet's close friends, however, many of them prominent in society circles, willingly accord her a place, and extend sincere congratulations to Richard.

"You say you're only seventeen, Nina," Harriet said, "the age when most girls are still in the schoolroom, long before they have affairs! Well, you're not interested in college, so that ought to give you three or four clear years of girlhood. You're bound to have other affairs, you've proved that! You go to South America—perhaps there is some interesting man on the steamer; you go to Canada or California; the world is yours. Now, Royal is different. He is an experienced man of affairs; he will always have an attraction for women, and they for him. You aren't his match, now, Nina. In a few years you may be."

"I'm not jealous!" Nina said, proudly. "But Harriet smiled.

"Yes, you are jealous. You wouldn't be a real true woman if you weren't!" she accused. A reluctant dimple tugged at Nina's pouting mouth. She did not dislike the idea of potential despotism, of the traveled, experienced woman of the world, confident of her charm.

"If I offered a check to Royal, do you suppose he'd accept it?" she remarked, after dark musing. She was sitting on the edge of her bed now, and Harriet was brushing her hair.

"You Aren't His Match, Now, Nina, In a Few Years You May Be."

"If you really are worried about his business affairs, Nina, why not try it?" Harriet suggested, sensibly. To this Nina returned a pointing:

"I'm perfectly willing to try it!" And as a great confession she added, with a sigh: "And I'll tell him what Father thinks!"

"Now you're talking like a woman who has herself well in hand!" Harriet said, approvingly. "When are you to see him?"

"He's coming over especially to see Father tomorrow," Nina said. "I suppose I might as well go down," she added, eyeing herself gloomily in her mirror, "for Ward and that boy seem absolutely at a loss for amusement!"

"And I'll be down presently," Harriet said. But when Nina was gone she walked slowly to her own dressing table, and sat down, and regarded herself steadily, and with heavy eyes. Unexpectedly, here between the family dinner and the early going to bed, on a June evening, a crisis in her life was confronting her, and she knew that she must meet it.

Ward's guest was only the young Saunders boy, who had been with them constantly last summer, and who was of absolutely no significance in their lives. And yet Harriet had been introduced to him all over again as "Mrs. Carter"—there was no halfway, in the eyes of the world at least, in this relationship of hers with Richard, and she must begin to take her place in the family.

"Mrs. Carter!" Harriet loved that distinction as if the title, the signature, and the dignity had never been vouchsafed to womankind before. She had marveled at her old self, that had taken "Miss" and "Mrs." with cheerful indifference—why, there was a world-wide chasm between the two! Just to have this silly Saunders boy call her Mrs. Carter, as a matter of course, was to receive the accolade that gave her all her longed-for dreams in one. It was the name of the man she loved, and, even though in a shadowy and unloved way, she liked the title that made her his.

And now she owed him the truth, the whole, painful, humiliating story. If she had told him months ago, so much the better and braver woman she! She had not done so; she had been fighting Nina and his mother then; she had been afraid. But she was not afraid now; he could forgive that long-ago girl of seventeen because her advocate was the woman of twenty-eight, the finished, cultivated, capable woman who had served him and his house, who must win his respect back because she loved him with every fiber of her being.

The words in which she would tell him came to her in a rush. Why—it was nothing! It was less than nothing. In half an hour she would be back here in her room again, with all the past clear and straight at last, with the cloud gone, and with her whole soul shining with hope of the glorious future. For a moment she knelt by her bed, her face in her hands.

She rose to her feet. There was a tap at the door.

It was Blondin. "If you please, m—Mr. Carter would be so much obliged if you would step down to the library, m." Harriet gave herself a parting glance, and followed the man downstairs.

"Courage!" she said to herself, with her hand on the library door. "I've exaggerated and enlarged upon this thing too long! I've imagined it into an importance that it really isn't at all!"

Richard was back at his desk; he smiled and rose as she came in. There was another man in the library, who rose and faced her, too.

And when Harriet saw him she knew that she was too late. It was Royal Blondin.

A dizziness and sickness came over her as she went slowly to the chair opposite Richard. She touched the desk for support as she sat down, and felt that her fingers were cold and wet.

"Mr. Blondin has come to talk to me about Nina," Richard said. Harriet somehow moved her dizzy eyes toward Blondin, and she smiled mechanically. But she had to moisten her lips before she could speak.

"I see!" Her voice, sounded horribly choked to her; she could find nothing to add to the meaningless words.

Zedeler Symphonic Quintet on Chautauqua Program

The Zedeler Symphonic Quintet, which will appear at the coming Redpath Chautauqua, will be under the leadership of Nicolai Zedeler, distinguished cellist, formerly with the symphony orchestras of Stockholm, Sweden, and of New York City.

Mr. Zedeler organized the quintet more than twelve years ago with a firm belief in the discriminating appreciation of the American public for the music of the masters. With two violins, a cello, piano, and a reed organ which fills the place occupied by the wind instruments in a larger orchestra, the organization has popularized the classics and has established itself as a high grade five-piece orchestra that approaches actual symphonic proportions in its musicianship.

Miss Booth, organist, is also a coloratura soprano and renders a number of vocal solos of great charm.

WHERE DOES THE BLAME BELONG?

Administration and Congress Trying to Shift Blame for Rotten Record

President Harding apparently doesn't intend to accept the verdict that the recent Republican primaries in Illinois, Indiana and Pennsylvania, where Old Guard reactionaries went down to defeat, were a repudiation of the executive or his administration, for the administration organs are boldly charging that the verdict was a repudiation of the Republican Congress and not of the administration.

The Chicago Tribune, the administration organ of the Middle West, is positively denunciatory of the work of the present Congress, in seeking to shield the executive from the consequences of the Old Guard defeat. It declares that the president's record is clean and constructive and then says: "We can hardly say as much of the present Congress. If repudiation is seen in recent state primaries it is repudiation not of President Harding but of a Congress which has been marked by delays, backstings, private interests, injustices and lack of construction."

The one given by the Chicago Tribune to place all of the blame upon Congress and relieve the president of his just share of the responsibility for the defeat of the supporters of his administration is taken up by the president's organ and mouthpiece, the Washington Post, which editorially indorses the impressionistic misstatements of the Tribune to the extent of repudiating them with the added comment that whether the voters of these states were primarily anxious to rebuke Congress or not, the effect of their vote seems to be a rebuke which Congress may heed.

After saying that "the situation in the Senate at this moment constitutes an indictment of the good sense of the Republican party," the Post charges the Republican Senate with "making a record of absenteeism and neglect of public business which will surely return to plague them." It points out that with sixty Republicans in the Senate there has not yet been presented a question on any roll call during the tariff discussion, and asks: "How can any Republican senator absent himself from the Senate at this juncture and then ask his constituents to reelect him on the theory that he has done good and faithful service?"

The pakey conditions in Republican affairs has reached the stage where it is evident that Congress is to be made the goat if the administration mouthpieces can bring it about, otherwise why this concerted action on their part in contrasting the record of the president with that of Congress in a way that endorses the executive and condemns the Congress in language as strong as that used by Democrats or the general public?

This attitude upon the part of the administration's organs raises the question whether or not the Republican Congress will shewly bear the sole blame for the disaster which has overtaken the reactionary wing of the party, and thus admit that it is unworthy to be further trusted, and at the same time permit the president to escape his share of the blame.

Admittedly this is a Do-Nothing Congress, but might it not have done something if it had had aggressive and constructive leadership on the part of the president?

Admittedly this is no time to try to revise the tariff, but was it not President Harding who insisted that a tariff bill should be passed?

Admittedly the bonus issue and bonus bill have been muddled, but has not the president's attitude upon that measure been shifting and uncertain from the beginning?

Admittedly the tax bill is a sad disappointment, but was it not an administration tax bill, and did not the president plead for the kind of a tax bill the reactionaries voted for?

Admittedly the Republican Senate reduced the tariff and standing of that body to its lowest level when it sealed Newberry, but was not Newberry the president's close friend and associate, and was the seating of Newberry any greater offense in morals than the appointment of Nat Gohlstein or the appointment of men indicted with Newberry to be federal district attorneys in the state of Michigan?

These are some of the questions that will inevitably arise if the Republican Congress, now repudiated by the administration organs, including the one always supposed to speak the president's mind, shall decide that the administration must bear its share of responsibility for the repudiation of the reactionaries Congress and the reactionary administration.

Illinois Central System Calls Attention to the Careful Crossing Campaign

The safety section of the American Railway Association has announced its "Careful Crossing Campaign" to be in progress from June 1 to September 30. In the past, these four months have been the worst third of the year for motor vehicle grade-crossing accidents. In preparation for the campaign the country has been covered with posters and stickers bearing a picture of a grade-crossing scene, showing a locomotive in the act of striking an automobile occupied by men, women and children. Above the picture are these words in large letters: "Cross Crossings Cautiously."

The public will understand the seriousness of this problem when it is explained that the number of motor vehicles registered in the United States increased from 1,033,000 in 1912 to 10,449,785 in 1921. There is now one motor vehicle for every ten persons in the United States.

Some believe that it is the duty of the railroads to protect motor vehicle users from their own carelessness by separating the grades at crossings. There are 252,000 railway grade crossings in the United States. It has been estimated that it would cost $12,000,000,000 to eliminate them, or two-thirds of the total value of the railroads as established by the Interstate Commerce Commission for rate making purposes. It will be seen, therefore, that grade crossing elimination is out of the question, at least for a long time to come. If the drivers of motor vehicles can be educated to "Stop, Look and Listen" at crossings, this will give the same result as the expenditure of $12,000,000,000, so far as safety is concerned.

The railroads have made splendid progress in reducing the number of accidents resulting in injury to their passengers and employees. However, motor vehicle grade-crossing accidents have been steadily increasing for years. These accidents are caused almost entirely by the negligence of motor vehicle drivers, and for that reason the efforts of the railroads to reduce them have been unavailing.

During 1920 there were 3,012 automobiles struck on grade crossings. In these accidents there were 1,273 persons killed and 3,977 persons injured. If the drivers of the motor vehicles involved in these accidents had "Stopped, Looked and Listened" at the crossings, not one of the accidents would have occurred.

A motor vehicle in the hands of a careful driver is an agency for safety. It can be driven up close to the railroad track and stopped in perfect safety—differing from horse drawn vehicles in that respect.

The Illinois Central System heartily approves the "Careful Crossing Campaign" of the safety section of the American Railway Association. We appeal to our patrons and friends and our employees to co-operate in every way possible to make the campaign successful.

We want the public to know us and what we stand for. Our motto is "Service." By co-operation with our patrons we have found many ways in which we can render them exceptional service, and our patrons in turn have served us well.

Constructive criticism and suggestions are invited.

C. H. MARKHAM,
President Illinois Central System.

AND STILL WE KICK

I am writing this in the living room of my house on a typewriter that weighs no more than a moderate sized book.

Light is provided by a lamp in which burn two incandescent bulbs. In an adjoining room is a telephone from which I can talk to any city on this continent.

Almost within arm's reach are several shelves of books filled with the most profound and beautifully expressed thoughts of the ages.

The floors of my home are cleaned with a suction sweeper, operated by electricity, while the clothes are put through an electric washer and ironed into an electrically driven mangle.

My children attend a school where they are given a better education than the sons of kings could command a century ago.

I enjoy all these things, and yet I am just an ordinary citizen with an ordinary income, living in an ordinary way. Tens of thousands have as much as I have, and more.

And yet I kick and wonder what ails the world!

Were the good things of life ever so easily at the command of the ordinary man as they are today? Don't we all do a lot of weeping that we haven't any right to do? And if we are not careful isn't there a danger that we will upset the greatest civilization the world has ever known?—William Feather, in the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

No Worms in a Healthy Child
All children troubled with Worms have an unhealthy color, which indicates poor blood, and as a rule, there is more or less stomach disturbance. GROVE'S TASTELESS CHILL TONIC given regularly for two or three weeks will enrich the blood, improve the digestion, and act as a general strengthening tonic to the whole system. Nature will then throw off or dispel the worms, and the child will be in perfect health. Pleasant to take. 60c per bottle.

Dice playing was a fashionable diversion in England during the reign of Henry VIII.

GROWING COWPEA IN COMBINATION

Greater Variety and Larger Yield of Feed Is Obtained and Easier to Cure.

CORN USED QUITE GENERALLY

Excellent Mixture for Silage and Is Being Extensively Used on Dairy Farms—Sorghums and Kaffirs Also Favored.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Although the cowpea can be satisfactorily grown alone, it is more advantageously grown for hay in combination with other crops. When grown in this manner, not only is a greater variety and larger yield of feed obtained, but the mixed hay is much more easily cured and handled. Corn is used quite generally with cowpeas, but only to a slight extent for hay. The crop most widely used with cowpeas for hay is sorghum, both sweet sorghums and kaffirs, although other crops, such as sudan grass, Johnsongrass, soy beans and millet, are used.

The cowpea is an excellent crop to grow with corn for silage, and it is being used extensively for this purpose on many dairy farms, especially in the northern part of the cowpea area.

If grown with corn for other than silage purposes, cowpeas are allowed to ripen a fair percentage of pods, which are gathered for seed and the remainder pastured. This method not only gives a crop of corn but also sufficient cowpea seed for sowing the next season, and the residue makes either a hay crop or a fair amount of grazing for stock. In many parts of the South, especially in the sugarcane districts of Louisiana, cowpeas instead of being pastured are harvested for hay after the corn has been gathered.

Cowpeas and Sorghum.

Cowpeas grown in combination with sorghum make an excellent hay or silage crop. As a hay crop this mixture is more easily cured than cowpeas alone, constitutes a well-balanced ration, and is relished by all kinds of farm stock. Both the sweet sorghums and the kaffirs are used. The Amber sorghum is most generally favored. When grown in rows, the Sumac and orange varieties of sorghum are fully as good as the amber since they grow larger and stronger plants. The whippoorwill, iron, unknown and clay varieties of cowpeas require about the same time to mature as the sorghums and therefore should be used in place of the earlier sorts. Harvesting with a mowing machine is most satisfactory.

When sown "broadcast" for hay, the sowing is best done with a grain drill on well-prepared land, the two kinds of seed being well mixed and sown at the same time. Usually the best rate to sow is about one bushel of cowpeas and half a bushel of sorghum seed to the acre. Where the grain drill is not available for sowing, the cowpea seed should be disked or harrowed in, and the sorghum should then be sown while the land is rough, the seed being covered with a drag harrow or weeder.

Excellent results are obtained by sowing cowpeas and sorghums together in cultivated rows 2½ to 3 feet apart. This method requires about 45 pounds of cowpeas and about one-third of a bushel of sorghum seed to the acre.

"LAX-FOS WITH PEPSIN" is a specially-prepared Syrup Tonic-Laxative for Habitual Constipation. It relieves promptly but should be taken regularly for 14 to 21 days to induce regular action. It Stimulates and Regulates. Very Pleasant to Take. 60c per bottle.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy.

HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the blood on the mucous surfaces of the system. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. ## ELECT HIGH SCHOOL TEACHERS.

The Hickman Board of Education in their meeting last week elected two teachers to vacancies in the high school department. They were Carl E. Martin, a graduate of Union University of Jackson, Tenn., and a man of considerable experience as a teacher, and Miss Annie Russell Moore, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. H. Moore, of this city, who graduates this year from the University of Kentucky. Both of these are capable teachers and the board feels that it has made excellent selections for teachers in the High School. This leaves but one more vacancy to be filled, that of teacher of domestic science.

COURIER'S 63RD ANNIVERSARY.

This issue is the beginning of volume 63 of The Courier. Sixty-three years of continuous publication is a good record for any paper and we are proud of our paper's age. The present publishers have had charge of the paper for only two years, and during that time we have had the pleasure of meeting most of our readers—have added some and lost some.

It is a difficult matter to please all, but we are doing the best we can. We have much to learn and the co-operation and help of our readers and friends will be appreciated. Any time you know of anything that would interest a reader let us know. It is impossible for us to learn all that is going on. We especially ask our rural friends to help us in this matter. They can help us build up a better paper and all will benefit from it.

Help us that we may help you and remember when we leave an item of news out that it is through an oversight and not intentional.

Visit the Courier office when you are in town and let's become better acquainted.

HEALTH NOTES.

Public Health is a subject which is today being brought constantly to our attention. It is one of those new-fangled ideas which our fathers and grandfathers got along very well without, so we wonder sometimes just why all this fuss and fury about it today.

What is public health anyway? Dr. H. Emerson, of New York, former Commissioner of Health there, tells us that it is the training of the well, not the care of the sick. All too long we have considered sickness the ruling of a Divine Providence. Sickness, rather than being God given, is undoubtedly man acquired, due to the fact that we are living far more artificial lives today than did our fathers and grandfathers.

Until recently we have worked backward in health matters; when the person became ill, we have bent all our energies and spent all our money to restore him to health, when with a bit of fore sightness the illness might have been prevented. How much time, thought and money is given to the thought of prevention by our community?

The slogan of the public health worker is prevention, and his ideal is health. The greatest problem that confronts them today is educating the public to using the same slogan.

The Public Health Worker who goes into your community has been trained to look at this question from the broadest public health viewpoint, but those things which she wishes to accomplish cannot be accomplished by waving a magic wand.

Public health work is a hard uphill pull and no one person can do the job alone. The community must stand shoulder to shoulder with the Public Health Worker if the problems are to be solved, and much accomplished. The care of the food supply, the housing conditions, the sanitary code, the condition of the school buildings, the quarantine for contagious disease, all are community problems, affecting the homes, and dependent upon the demands of the majority of its citizens.

Public Health Work then is team play with the public health officials giving the signals and the signals deserving the heartiest cooperation of all the city and county officials and the community in general, as it is a community responsibility and problem, therefore should not be left entirely to one or two individuals.

Just what a community puts into the work is just what returns and benefits the community shall receive. It is entirely with the community to determine whether public health work is a success or a failure.

POULTRY

DUCK RAISING IS PROFITABLE
Peking Are Most Popular Breed for Production of Meat and Runners for Eggs.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture)

Although ducks do not appear to be as well adapted as chickens as a source of income to average farm conditions, yet many farmers are finding duck raising profitable as a side issue to their other farm operations. The demand for table ducks in the cities seems to be on the increase.

The period of incubation for ducks' eggs is 28 days, except for the Muscovy duck, which is 33 to 35 days. The eggs may be hatched either naturally by hens or ducks or artificially in incubators. Strong, fertile eggs are a prime essential to good hatching and are obtained only from stock properly mated and kept under the best possible conditions to secure health and vigor. Eggs from overfat breeding stock do not usually produce a large percentage of strong ducklings. Peking and Indian Runner ducks rarely sit; consequently, if natural methods of incubation are to be used the eggs are usually hatched under hens. Duck eggs should be washed if dirty, for it does not appear to injure their hatching qualities.

Before setting a hen dust her thoroughly with insect powder. In applying this powder hold the hen by the feet, with her head hanging down, and work it thoroughly into the feathers, giving special attention around the vent and under the wings. Sitting hens should be fed whole or cracked grains, such as corn or wheat. Place 9 to 11 ducks' eggs under a hen, depending on her size and the season of the year, using the smaller number of eggs in cold weather and the larger number in warm weather. Confine the hens at hatching time and do not disturb them until they become restless, when it may be best to remove the ducklings that hatched first.

Hens must be well cared for in hatching ducks' eggs, as the period of incubation is a week longer than that of hens' eggs. It usually takes ducklings from 24 to 48 hours to hatch after they pick the shells; therefore it is advisable to allow the hen to get off the nest for feed and water when the first ducklings pick the shell and then confine her to the nest until the hatching is over. Ducks' eggs need more moisture than hens' eggs at hatching time, as it takes the ducks much longer to get out of the shell. Poultry specialists in the United States Department of Agriculture advise, therefore, that the eggs should be sprinkled liberally with warm water previous to hatching.

All duck eggs should be tested at least twice during incubation, preferably on the seventh and fourteenth days, and the infertile eggs and those with dead germs removed. Dead germs in duck eggs decompose very rapidly and are often detected by their odor and should be removed from the incubator.

Duck eggs having pure white shells can be tested as early as the fourth or fifth day and the infertile eggs sold to bakers for use in the kitchen.

Ducks are much easier to brood artificially than chickens, but they may also be raised under hens successfully. If raised by the latter method, it is advisable to confine the hens and allow the ducklings free range, as the hens are apt to wander too far away with their broods. Ducklings which are to be sold as green ducks are not usually allowed much range, but are fed heavily and forced for rapid growth. The ducklings which are to be kept for breeding should have the web of their feet punched, using a different number of punch marks for each year so that their age can be readily determined.

SELECT EGGS FOR SETTING

Avoid Those That Are Abnormally Small and Poorly Shaped—Stick to One Color.

Eggs that are abnormally small and poorly shaped should not be used for incubation; neither should eggs that have thin or very porous shells, say specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture. If possible, eggs should be set when fresh, and it is never advisable to use for hatching eggs that are more than two weeks old. One of the quickest ways to obtain uniformity in the off spring is to select uniformly good-sized eggs of the same color.

BRICK TAX MULTIPLIED NINE TIMES

It seems like a waste of space to quote Democratic objections to the pending Fordney-McCumber Protectionists' tariff bill, which includes even salt in the articles of food taxed and the medicines of the sick room, because the editorialists of the Republican press throughout the country are filled with unqualified denunciations of the bill, extending even to unimpeachable personal references. The heights of profiteering and injustice were reached when sand was included in the list of things to be taxed and the duty on brick multiplied ninefold at a time when the housing situation, not only in the big cities but even in the small villages, is almost unendurable. The outrageousness of such procedure was so great that even Senator Calder, a hard boiled protectionist and a builder, admitted that even the present duty might be taken off.

This outrageous attempt to add further burdens to tenants and to home builders was thoroughly ventilated by Senators Robinson (Ark.) and Stanley (Ky.), among the most effective of Democratic spokesmen, but no disposition was shown by the hard boiled protectionists to recede from the amendment to the brick schedule increasing the existing rate from 25 to 225 per cent on bricks.

CALOMEL GOOD BUT NEXT DOSE MAY SALIVATE

It Is Mercury, Quicksilver, Shocks Liver and Attacks Your Bones

Calomel salivation is horrible. It swells the tongue, loosens the teeth and starts rheumatism. There's no reason why a person should take sickening salivating calomel when a few cents buys a large bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone—a perfect substitute for calomel. It is a pleasant vegetable liquid which will start your liver just as surely as calomel, but it doesn't make you sick, and cannot salivate.

Calomel is a dangerous drug, besides it may make you feel weak, sick and nauseated tomorrow. Don't lose a day's work. Take a spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone instead and you will wake up feeling great. No salts necessary. Your druggist says if you don't find Dodson's Liver Tone acts better than treacherous calomel your money is waiting for you.

HARRIET AND THE PIPER

"Mr. Blondin asks my consent to an immediate marriage," Richard said. "You know my objections to that, Harriet, of course? We have just been discussing them, as I explained to him. This is a painful matter to me, and I regret it. But Mr. Blondin has given me no choice but to tell him frankly why I think him an unsuitable husband for my daughter. I have told him exactly what my procedure will be in such a case, and I think we understand each other."

Royal was smiling the serene, dreamy smile that was characteristic of him.

"Nim," he said, tenderly, "is warm-hearted. And a chance allusion to my financial position, which I thought I owed her, has distressed her unnecessarily. It will, truly, be out of the question for me to travel, as we had planned. The unfortunate speculations of my friend—"

"Whose name you withhold," Richard interrupted the musical voice to say, dryly.

"Because of a promise!" Royal flushed promptly. "But," he resumed, turning to Harriet, "I shall be able to negotiate this business, as I assure Mr. Carter, without any assistance from him or his daughter." His lip curled scornfully, "and I do not propose to give her up for any three years—or three weeks!"

Harriet could only look at him fixedly, with an ashen face.

"God help me," she breathed in her soul. "God help me!"

"Well," said Richard with weary impatience, "we did not call you down to bore you with this! I asked to see you, Harriet, because Mr. Blondin has made the statement to me, just now, that you were heartily in accord with his plans for Nina and that you approved of the affair!"

The prayer in Harriet's heart did not stop as she moved her wretched eyes to Blondin.

"I believed that you and she had not seen each other since December," she reminded him. "I lost no chance to advise her against the engagement! I thought it was all over!"

"Well!" Richard said, with a breath of relief. He had been wretchedly close, now he settled back in his chair and moved his contemptuous scrutiny to Blondin.

"One moment!" Royal Blondin said, gently. But he was also pale. "You

"Ask Her—She'll Tell You! Ask Her!"

believe that I would make Nina a good husband, don't you?" he asked Harriet directly and quietly.

She was not looking at him. Her eyes were on Richard Carter.

"I believe you would ruin her life!" she said, deliberately.

"Thank you," Richard said. "I think that is all, Mr. Blondin. I was aware that you had—misunderstood Mrs. Carter when you made that statement!"

"Not quite all," Blondin persisted. "You believe that Nina would be wiser not to marry me?" he asked Harriet.

"You—!" She cleared her throat.

"You know that I think so!" she said. Blondin laughed.

"And now, Mr. Blondin, you will kindly leave my house!" said Richard.

The other man was watching Harriet, with a menace in his narrowed eyes. White lines had drawn themselves about his tightly closed lips, yet he was smiling. He had lost the game, truly, but she knew he would play his last card, just the same. The sniveling, the calm of years fell from him, and his voice deepened into a sort of cold and quiet fury as he said:

"One moment, Mr. Carter. Why don't you ask your wife what makes her think I won't make Nina a good husband? Why don't you ask her if she has been hiding something from you all this time? Why don't you ask her if she herself wasn't madly in love—and with me!—when she was Nina's age, and whether she was married in my studio, to me, ten years ago!"

He had shot the phrases at her with a distinctness almost violent. Now his dry voice stopped, but his swift, venomous look went from the silent man at the desk to the silent woman who stood before him. Before either moved or spoke he spoke again.

"Ask her—she'll tell you! Ask her!"

"Be quiet!" Richard said. "I don't believe one word of it!" And then as the girl neither raised her eyes nor attempted to speak, he asked her, encouragingly and quickly: "Harriet, will you tell him that not one word of that is true?"

Harriet had risen, and was standing at the back of the carved black chair with both her hands resting upon it. She had looked quietly at Blondin, when he began to speak, and the beautiful wide breast that her black evening gown left bare had risen once or twice on a swift impulse to interrupt him. But now she was looking down at her bared fingers, with something despairing and helpless in the droop of her bright head and lowered lashes.

It had had its times of seeming frightful to her, this secret, in the troubled mutings of the past year. But it had never loomed so horrible and so momentous as now, in the silent library, with the eyes of the man she loved fixed anxiously upon her. He had trusted, he was beginning to admire her, and like his wife and his daughter, and his mother, she had failed him.

"Harriet?" he said in quick uneasiness. She raised her head now, and looked at him with weary eyes devoid of any expression except bewilderment and pain.

"Yes," she said, simply. "That is all—quite true. It sounds—!" she hesitated, and groped for words—"It sounds—as if—!" she began and stopped again. "But it is all quite true!" she finished, in the troubled tone of a child who is misunderstood.

CHAPTER XIV.

The curtains at the French windows in the library at Crowlands stirred in the breeze of the warm summer night, the pendulum of the big clock behind Richard Carter moved to and fro, but for a long time there was no other sound in the library. Richard had dropped his eyes, was idly staring at the blank sheet of paper before him. Royal Blondin, who had folded his arms, for a moment studied Harriet between half-closed lids, but presently his eyes fell, too, and with a rather troubled expression he studied the pattern of the great oriental rug.

Harriet stood motionless, turned to be said in her behalf, she could not say it now. For the first time the full measure of her responsibility and the full measure of her deceit smote her, and in utter sickness of spirit she could advance no excuse. It was not that she had failed Blondin, or that she had failed Richard, but the extent of her failure toward herself appalled her. She was not the good, brave, cultivated woman she had liked to think herself; she was one more egotist, with Nina, and Isabelle, and Ida, unscrupulously playing her own game for her own ends.

"I'm extremely sorry," Richard said, presently, in a somewhat lifeless tone. "I imagine that if my daughter had known this, she might have been spared some suffering and some humiliation. But we needn't consider that now." He was silent, frowning faintly. He put up a fine hand and adjusted his eyeglasses with a little impatient misanthropic twitching of his whole face that Harriet knew to be characteristic of his worried moods.

"Mr. Blondin," he said, wearily and politely, "I have had a great deal on my mind, lately, and have perhaps been hasty in my condemnation of you. However, this does not particularly help your cause with my daughter. There are a great many aspects to the matter, and I—I must take time to consider them. Nina must be my first consideration, poor child! Her mother failed her—we have all failed her! She has a right to know of this conversation—"

Harriet stirred, and his eyes moved to her. Without a word, and with a stricken look in her beautiful, ashen face, she turned, and went slowly toward the door. When she reached it, she steadied herself a second by pressing one time hand against the dark wood, then she opened it and was gone.

"I'm very sorry—" Blondin said hesitatingly, when the men were alone.

"Mrs. Carter," Richard said, getting to his feet, and very definitely indicating an end to the conversation, "before she consented to the arrangement into which we entered, of course took me into her confidence in this matter!"

"She—she did?" Royal stammered.

"Certainly she did," Richard said, harshly. And looking at him the other man saw that his face looked haggard and colorless. "She did not mention your name, I presume out of a sense of generosity to you. I could have wished," he added, "that you had been similarly generous, and had seen fit to leave her, and leave my daughter alone. I think I must ask you to excuse me," said Richard at the door. His tone was one of absolute suffocation. "I can see no object in your frankness tonight, unless to distress and humiliate Mrs. Carter. My daughter, and not myself, is the one entitled to your confidence, and you are well aware of my feeling where she is concerned! I would to God," said Richard, with bitterness, "that I had never seen your face! Mrs. Carter has been a useful—and indispensable!—member of this family for many years; if there was in her past some unpleasant and painful event, that is her own affair!"

"Not when she marries a man who is unworthy of it," Blondin suggested, in his pleasant, soft tones.

"That is mine!" Richard said, sternly. And he opened the library door.

"Good evening!" he said.

"Good evening!" Blondin, with his light, loitering step, crossed the threshold, and Richard closed the door. He took his chair again and reached toward the bell that would have brought Bottomley to summon Nina in turn. But halfway to the bell his resolution wavered, disappeared. Instead, he rested his elbows on the table, and his head in his hands, and there sounded from his chest a great sigh that was almost a groan.

Oh he was tired—he was tired—he was tired! It was all a mess—the boy, the girl, their mother, his own arrangements for their protection and safety. All a mess.

She had been beautiful, that girl, with her golden hair in the lamplight, and her white arms a little raised to rest her locked hands on the chair. Like some superb actress of tragedy, some splendid and sullen prisoner at the bar. The slender figure in the dull wrapping of satin, and the white bosom, had looked so young, so virginal, the blue eyes were so honestly frightened and ashamed. And she had been that boaster's wife—in his arms! Divorced! Harriet Field? Poor girl, cornered by this unscrupulous scoundrel, this bully, with all the ugly past dragged up like the muddy bottom of a river, staining and clouding the clear waters. And what a look she had given him, there under the lamp!

"It's a funny code," he mused. "Barbarians, that's what we are, when it comes to women. Nina, Ida, Isabelle, Harriet—all of them pay for the man-made rule! I shouldn't have forced her into this business marriage; it was taking an advantage of her. No woman wants to marry for anything but love, and if she had married for love, she would have made a clean breast of this old affair, of course. I didn't expect that. We've made a nice mess of it, all around!"

"I mustn't let her work herself into a fever over all this!" he found himself thinking.

But Nina must be the first consideration. He must plan for Nina. He brought his thoughts back resolutely—his daughter must break her engagement now, there was that much gained. And for the journey to Rio—

"But why didn't she tell me!" he interrupted himself, suddenly. The reference was not to Nina. Again he saw the superb white shoulders in the soft flood of lamplight, and the flash of the blue eyes that turned toward Blondin.

"She could have killed him!" Richard said. "My God! how she will love when she does love!"

Meanwhile, to Harriet had come the bitterest hour of her life. She had reached a crossroads, and with steady fingers and an anguished heart she prepared for the only step that to her whirling brain and shamed soul seemed possible. She must disappear. There was no alternative.

She had harmed them all, they could only think of her now as an unscrupulous and mischievous woman who had by chance entered their lives when they were all in desperate need of wisdom and guidance, who had played her own contemptible game, and added one more hurt to the hurt reputation of the house of Carter.

Harriet got out of her evening gown and into a loose wrapper. She went about somewhat aimlessly, yet the suitcases, spread open on the bed, were gradually filled, and her personal possessions gradually disappeared from tables and walls. Now and then she stopped short, heartstuck and trembling; once her lips quivered and her eyes filled, but for the most part she did not pause.

Nina, at about eleven, had come to the door between their rooms, and opened it. The girl was undressed, and for a few moments she watched Harriet scowlingly, with narrowed eyes.

"Are you going away?" she said, presently. Harriet brought heavy eyes to meet hers, and stood considering a minute, as if bringing her thoughts back a long distance.

"I—going away? Yes," she said, slowly. "Yes, I may."

Nina stood watching, which seemed vaguely to trouble Harriet, who gave her a restless glance now and then as she went to and fro. Presently she spoke to Nina again.

"Good-night, Nina!"

"Good-night!" snapped Nina, and the door slammed.

Harriet continued to move about for perhaps half an hour before Nina's odd manner recurred to her, on a wave of memory, and she seemed to hear again Nina's ungracious tone.

"He told her!" she said, suddenly. "She saw Royal, and he told her! Poor child—"

COTTON GOODS GOING UP.

Cotton goods of all kinds during the past ten days have been increased in price. Prices quoted at the present time are appreciably in advance of those of two weeks ago, and every day sees a new increase. Local merchants have some mighty good prices which they are selling this class of goods for, and many of them are telling of them in The Courier this week. It will pay you to look over the various announcements and plan to supply your needs quickly for the future, for the only outlook is for an increase rather than any decrease in the price of cotton goods.

THE COUNTY AGENT'S COLUMN

It's Mildew.

The white growth on the clover leaves of clover all over the county is mildew (a fungus). It will not seriously injure the clover and it is not poisonous to stock either green or cured. There is always a limited amount of it. The excessive rain this spring has encouraged its development.

Quite a Reputation.

It may be interesting to the people of Fulton County to know that a representative of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., was in this section last week and spent a day with the County Agent. His purpose was to get first hand information about our progress with soy beans. After a tour through the county he stated that from a standpoint of acres of soy beans planted in corn, Fulton County stood first in the United States. That, indeed, is an enviable reputation and one which Fulton County farmers should be especially proud. Let's be first in other things.

McFadden Community Organized.

Last Tuesday night fifteen farmers and the County Agent met at McFadden School House to work out a program of community development. They believe in a better community and they are going to have it.

They also believe in cooperative effort of team thinking and acting for the common good. This was the 5th community to build a program of development.

Those elected to act as leaders of the various farm activities are as follows:

J. F. Bard, Tobacco; E. P. Daws, Corn; Chas. Herring, Hogs; Charley Bowers, Wheat; Henry Kelly, Poultry; Cleveland Bard, Legumes.

Hail Destroys Millions of Dollars of Tobacco

The loss of tobacco by hail in this and other tobacco states within the last five years has run up into millions of dollars with only a small part covered by insurance.

Yet, the amount of insurance received by growers who had the foresight thus to protect themselves against such loss, was enormous and should make every grower not only feel the necessity of insuring his tobacco crop against hail storms loss but to do that very thing and do it at once.

What Dr. Halley Says: Dr. Samuel H. Halley, of the Burley Tobacco Growers' Company on lowering its rates on tobacco hail insurance, said, "Within the period that I have had hail insurance, I have had four severe losses. The money I received exceeded considerably what I paid in, to say nothing of my peace of mind that I was fully protected in case of a storm. I have always advocated carrying hail insurance on tobacco without which every grower takes a chance to lose all. With it he can, in safety, go into the business of producing a crop which requires, as does tobacco, so much labor, time and money."

Now that the Burley Growers have gone into an organization to handle their business in a modern economic business-like way, I see no reason why all growers can not take out insurance on the reduced rates the companies are now quoting. Look up the insurance agent in your section now, and let him protect you against the loss of your tobacco. Policies effective July 10th, noon.

SPRAYING IS NOT DIFFICULT

Too Many Farmers Neglect Their Orchards Because of Other Pressing Work on Farm.

The Middle West produced a good crop of apples last year, but not nearly enough to meet home demand. And yet the farm orchards alone could be made to easily satisfy market demands if they were sprayed and properly cared for.

Spraying is no longer a difficult operation. The spray material now comes already prepared and all one has to do is to weigh out the right amount of arsenate of lead, measure out the lime-sulphur, mix with water and go to work. Of course, the work must be done at the right time. A thorough job must be done, as well. The task will be no harder to perform nor require any more energy than it will to grow most of the cultivated crops of the farm.

Too many farmers think that they do not have time to spray their orchards for the reason that the work must be done at a time of the year when they are busy with the planting as well as the cultivation of corn and other crops, but this is not a valid reason. Periods of wet weather prevail more or less frequently during this busy time, which make it impossible to get out on the land, either to plant or to cultivate, and it is at such times that spraying can usually be done to best advantage. It does not matter how wet the soil may be, so long as the foliage on the trees is dry.

It is during the cool, moist time following periods of wet weather that scab on apples gets a good start. Those who have provided themselves with a spray machine will have little difficulty in getting over the farm orchard of average size in about half a day. One can fill a 50-barrel outfit with spray material and apply it in one hour's time. This will be enough liquid to thoroughly spray from ten to fifteen bearing trees, thus making it quite possible to get over an acre of orchard in about half a day.

An outfit suitable for farm work will cost anywhere from $30 to $50. It should consist of a good pump, about 25 feet of hose, and a 10-foot spray rod with the best nozzles that can be had. Barring the few repairs that one will have to provide from time to time, the outfit will last for several years.

TO KEEP THE HANDS PRETTY

Simple Methods Will Aid Housewife During the Fruit and Vegetable Season.

One of the bugbears of the fresh fruit and vegetable season is the resulting stained appearance of the hands.

However, says a writer in the New York Tribune, I have one very cunning friend who is "chief cook and bottle washer" and everything else for a large family of boys, doing the entire baking and brewing and housework (with the good help of the aforesaid boys), whose hands are, to my constant amazement, always not only immaculately clean, but white and soft, with well-kept manicured nails, seldom showing a trace of grime or stain.

"How do you do it?" I asked.

"This is her answer: 'To begin with, always keep a cuticle on in a saucer over the sink, and use it immediately (not in an hour or even five minutes) after scraping carrots, peeling potatoes or cutting apples. Keep the other half on the bathroom shelf, cut side down, of course, or use whole lemon punctured, and let it stand in a little water to prevent hardening. This gives, when used with a hard, good soap, besides cleaning, a soft texture to the skin.'

A dependable and expert druggist told me, when asked if there were not something to really take out stains, that chlorinated soda was sure. We purchased some at once and since then I have never let my little bottle get empty. It stands conveniently on the bathroom shelf and after a particularly stinky season with vegetables or fruit I pour a few drops in the palm of one hand, rub the fingers of the other in it, and the stains vanish as if by magic. Add a few drops of water and be sure that the liquid gets well around the nails and tips of fingers. Run a little more water into the bowl, use a nail brush and pumice and not only hands but nails will assume their wonted appearance.

"Caution: Be sure and do not let any of the liquid, however diluted, fly on a colored dress when washing your hands. Carelessness in this respect before I had learned by sad experience resulted in covering the waist and cuffs of a lavender dress with fine ecru spatters."

THE VOGUE OF JET REVIVED

Old-Fashioned Trimming Finds Favor in the Plans of Costume Designers.

Now is the opportune time to rescue from the obscurity of the piece box or cedar chest the old-fashioned jet trimmings that once graced "Age of Innocence" velvet capes and satin gowns. For jet trimming—used in moderation, of course—finds favor in the plans of costume designers.

One especially attractive dance frock destined for mid-season wear, is all black, made of lace over satin. The slim, sheath-like foundation slip of satin is cut rather short, while the front and back panels of the sheer lace overdress are weighted with bands of handsome antique jet trimming. Narrow side insets of closely plaited satin gives the underdress requisite fullness for dancing, while the soft folds and loops of the sides of the lace overdress are saved from a too bouffant effect by the weight of jet motifs scattered with the subtle carelessness that proclaims consummate skill.

Square neck and abbreviated sleeves are finished with the same sort of jet banding used to edge the lace overskirt panels.

SOME NOVEL SPORT SKIRTS

Flannel, Plain and Striped, and Velours Among the Accepted Materials.

The vogue for separate skirts and sweaters is well established, and now sport skirts claim attention with their distinctive touches and serviceable materials. Flannel, plain and striped, is among the accepted materials for sport wear, and there are some smart skirts in checked velours. Linen and washable damask are among the cotton fabrics, and some skirts are made of fancy silk crepe.

Of plain white flannel is a good looking sport skirt, easily tubbed. It is a straight-line model, not too narrow at the bottom, and belted at the top. Pockets are slashed at the hips. This skirt combines wonderfully well with a wool jersey overblouse or a Tuxedo sport coat.

White linen strictly tailored is useful for a smart skirt for morning wear in the country. Crescent pockets are the only trimming. With this type skirt one wears a mannish blouse of striped madras or voile.

Another skirt listed among the cotton materials comes in striped damask. Straight slit pockets finished with a bloused band, and buttons relieve its severity.

For golf or tennis is a skirt in blazer flannel plaited to give fullness. White flannel striped in black, navy, green with a tailored skirt of crepe de chine or a jersey sport jacket in a neutral color.

Cool silks create lovely skirts, and crepe de chine in an extra heavy quality is among the more sensible garments. An unusual model is box plaited and hemstitched between the plaits. A grille that wraps itself twice about the figure is used instead of a straight belt.

Lustrous sport silk in big blocked effects come in turquoise, orchid, honey dew, rust, silver gray, navy and beige and needs only a simple pattern to make it up.

Satin is again popular for skirts, and is offered not only in white, but a wonderful variety of colors as well. It goes nicely with silk sweaters and georgette overblouses.

SAVES THE TIME AND THREAD

Make More Than One Garment at Time; Do Not Take From Machine at End of Seam.

One can arrange to make more than one garment at a time and save thread. Do not take away from machine at end of seam, but have another seam ready to start under the presser foot. It is surprising how much those ends waste. Instead of a French seam, place edges together as in ordinary seam, allowing one edge to extend just far enough beyond the other to turn down. Turn this over the other, then both in a narrow hem, and one row of stitching makes a neat seam, which for a great many garments does just as well as a French seam. By buying a large quantity of one pattern for children's clothes, you often get an extra garment from what would go in the "piece-bag" if each suit, etc., were different. Same for men's shirts, for where we need three yards for one shirt, five and one-half, sometimes five yards, will cut two.

Fall Hat Styles.

The outstanding feature of the early fall hats is the strong leaning to bright embroideries as trimming. Black hats trimmed in wool embroideries in novel motifs and in the most vivid color tones are unquestionably good looking. One small hat, recently seen, of the tam type made of black velvet was embroidered all over with wools in Czechoslovak colorings, the embroidery being applied in a sort of tufted effect. Two pompons made of wool finished the hat at the left back.

Lace Bags Match Gowns.

Lace bags are among the imports made up over foundations of gold or silver tissue or white or tinted satin and encrusted with jewels. These bags are mounted with the new crystal frames and clasps chased with gold or silver filigree.

CLINTON MAN KILLED IN MINNEAPOLIS, MINN.

In a telegram to the Hickman County Gazette from the Minneapolis Journal Thursday, it was stated that William S. Allen, who was born and reared in Clinton had been shot and killed by an unknown assassin in Minneapolis. The telegram asked if he had any relatives in Clinton who might give a motive for the crime or if he had any enemies in Clinton.

According to the Gazette, officers in Clinton believe the slain man is Will Allen, who escaped from the county jail in Clinton several weeks ago. He was being held on a charge of moonshining.

Ernest Provow, son of J. H. Provow, and Miss Thelma Ray, daughter of Chas. Ray, were united in marriage yesterday afternoon, the wedding coming as quite a surprise to their many friends here.

The groom has a position at the Mengel, while the bride has been connected with the office force of that concern for some time.

The Courier wishes them happiness and prosperity.

Miss Helen McMullin entertained at her home on Tuesday evening in honor of Miss Edna Polk, of Covington, Tenn. A large number of the younger set were present and all report a good time.

The regular schedule on the C. M. & G. will be resumed today. It will be remembered that during the high water a mixed train was put on which made only one trip a day.

Monday night at the Newport Musical Revue ladies will be free with each adult ticket.

L. N. Gregory is building a nice bungalow for Mrs. Linnie Cloor in West Hickman.

BALL GAME SUNDAY.

Fulton will play Hopkinsville at the Mengel Park here Sunday afternoon. Both teams are strong and a good game is expected.

Egg Dances.

The egg dance, now confined chiefly to Spain, among the people of Valencia, was a once popular diversion in England, Scotland, Holland and other parts of Europe. A number of eggs were arranged in a prescribed form upon the dancing floor, and among them a blind-folded dancer moved as best he might, to music, the object being to execute an intricate dance without breaking the eggs. The music, like the arrangement of the eggs, also was prescribed.

Horticultural Hints

PRUNING YOUNG PEACH TREE

Heading Should Be Done Just Above Location of Strong Buds—Cut Inside Branches.

Heading on yearling peach trees just set out should be done just above the location of good strong buds. On two and three-year-old trees, only the inside branches, crossing trunks and very low branches should be cut off, and the tips headed back from a quarter to a third. Very severe pruning will delay fruiting a year or more.

Peach Tree Before Pruning—Fruit-Bearing Wood Has Been Largely at Point Remote From Main Limbs.

A fact forcibly brought out by experimental work carried on by the New Jersey agricultural experiment station. The tips of very long twigs two feet or more in length, should be cut back slightly to strengthen them.

On bearing peach trees the tops should be open and vase-shaped to facilitate spraying, and to let plenty of light and air in, thus reducing trouble with brown rot and scab. Severe thinning out of the twigs is important. It is not desirable to tip back twigs, as it promotes too much bushy growth and consequently poor crops.

On old peach trees which have ceased to bear large crops through age or neglect, rejuvenation can be accomplished by cutting the top back very heavily—even going back into three and four-year-old wood, or even by cutting to stubs five or six feet from the trunk. This severe pruning will force out a new low head, and will revivify the tree, and will frequently stimulate it that it will bear several more heavy crops. Thorough spraying, cultivation, and fertilization must accompany this rejuvenation if best results are to be obtained.

CUTTINGS FOR GOOSEBERRIES

Plants Should Be Placed Six Feet Apart and Cared for in Same Way as Currants.

Gooseberries are grown from cuttings like currants and also propagated by mound layering. In following this method the tops are cut off in the early spring leaving stubs four or five inches long. Many new shoots will grow from these stubs, and when they are hardening a little in early summer the lower four or five inches of these shoots is covered with a mound of earth. Each shoot will then send out roots, forming a number of independent plants. The earth is taken away in the fall and the young-rooted plants cut off and either planted or kept slightly moist in earth or moss till spring. Gooseberries should be planted six feet apart and cared for in the same way as currants, says the United States Department of Agriculture.

SPRING PRUNING PREFERRED

Work on All Cane Fruits Should Be Done Just Before Sap Commences to Flow.

Pruning of berries and all cane fruits should preferably be done in the spring just before the sap commences to flow and after all danger of killing frosts are past. Danger of winterkilling where fall or winter pruning is practiced is great, because the open end of the cane permits the frost to travel down the soft center of the canes to the roots. That is why spring pruning is to be preferred. In this pruning, remove all dead canes from the previous season's fruiting canes and also thin down the present canes to not more than three or four sturdy ones to each old, established root stock. Quality berries are worth more than a quantity of inferior berries and these quality berries are produced only where the roots are not overtaxed.

Trees Planted Too Close.

Most orchard trees are planted too close for best results. While this can be remedied in the planting of new orchards we have to take conditions as they are found in the case of the older orchards and make the best of them.

Keep Berries Productive.

Berries kept in a strong, sturdy condition by careful and systematic pruning and by constant cultivation just as one would cultivate the corn field will remain productive for years.

GIVES THE SUMMERY TOUCH

Well may the weavers and dealers smile when Paris brings this model into fashion—for long, full skirts mean much material. The designer of this smart frock combines a loose long waist and a wide skirt of navy crepe. White organdie gives it a summery touch.

SOME HINTS TO DRESSMAKERS

Medium of Uneven Lengths Being Used to Express Individuality in Articles of Dress.

Individuality in many articles of dress, especially frocks, suits, coats and blouses, is now being expressed through the medium of uneven lengths. Skirts wide, hooped, long and uneven, are being introduced for evening wear in tulle and lace. Sleeves emphasize the wider full lengths with the nun's sleeve specially featured. Tunicis droop at the back and skirts are short at the back and under a long front apron.

A new sleeve shown on dresses and sometimes on coats is in bell shape, the opening brought to a close fit above the wrist by means of inserted georgette or other soft fabric, in a color contrasting with the material of the garment. The effect is similar to a Japanese lantern.

The Str. G. W. Hill will run an excursion out of Hickman on the night of June 12.

Uses for Bran.

For paintwork and varnished wood-work bran is invaluable. Colored goods usually fade when washed, but if washed in bran water they will not lose their color. It is excellent also as a scalp cleanser, making the hair glossy. Used instead of soap, it softens and whitens the hands. To prepare bran water, fill a small bag with bran, place in a bowl and cover with boiling water.

White Skirts.

White skirts are worn with coats of practically all colors. One particularly attractive combination is the cream white skirt and the Chinese blue coat, with creamy lace waistcoat. Heavy cotton crepe is the fabric used for coat and skirt.

Jud Tunkins.

Jud Tunkins says early rising is not much use to the man who puts in most of the day taking naps.

in the celebration of Memorial Day with the decoration of the graves of the fallen heroes and the presentation of an excellent program appropriate to the occasion. Music was rendered by the was rendered:

"After you have been two weeks in the house with one of these terrible handy men that ask their wives to be sure and wipe between the tines of the forks, and know just how much raising bread ought to have, and how to hang out a wash so each piece will get the best sun, it's a real joy to get back to the ordinary kind of man."

WHAT TO HAVE FOR DINNER

As a beginning for any little company dinner a cocktail of various fruits is always acceptable.

Grapefruit Cocktail.—Make
grapefruit baskets
by cutting a small handle through to the center of a grapefruit,
scoop out the pulp and reserve for the filling. Take the grapefruit pulp, one orange, a little pineapple dice. Mix well and add a sirup made by using the fruit juice and sugar cooked together and cooled. Fill the shells and garnish the top of each handle with a sprig of mint thrust through the top of the handle, or a flower may be used for decoration.

White Cookies.—Take one-half cupful of shortening, one cupful of sugar, two well-beaten eggs, two tablespoonfuls of sweet milk, flour to make a soft dough to roll, adding two teaspoonfuls of baking powder. Flavor with vanilla. The recipe makes three dozen cookies.

Dinner Cheese.—Put through a meat grinder one-half cupful of stuffed olives, add to one cream cheese and when well blended add to two cupfuls of grated American cheese. Season well with salt, roll in the form of a long roll. Place on a dolly-covered plate and decorate with sliced stuffed olives. Place a cheese knife on the plate and let each serve himself.

Grapefruit Jelly and Cheese.—The grapefruit juice not used in the cocktail may be used the next day by thickening it with a little gelatin and when firm cut in small cubes and serve with balls of well-seasoned cottage cheese.

Salmon Salad.—Mix together one and one-half cupfuls of salmon flaked with one-half cupful of celery, two tablespoonfuls of chopped green pepper, one small onion and salt and pepper to taste. Peel two tomatoes and cut them into dice and mix with the salad, or cut them in quarters and use as a garnish. Arrange on a bed of lettuce and garnish with mayonnaise.

SEASONABLE DAINTIES

A very pretty and tasty dish that may be prepared for company is:

Pimiento Bisque.

—Put through a rice one can, six red peppers; add
two teaspoonfuls of salt, one-half teaspoonful of tabasco sauce, one half cupful of cream and three plums of chicken stock. Let come to the boiling point and serve in cups.

Cottage Cheese Salad.—On lettuce arrange a circle of seasoned rice cottage cheese; in the center put yolks of hard cooked eggs also seasoned and rice. Any dressing desired may be served.

Carrot Marmalade.—Take one and one-half pounds of young carrots, scrape and put them through a meat grinder. Add two lemons cut in bits with the seeds removed, put into a double boiler and cook. Combine with an equal weight of sugar and cook until thick. Place in glasses and seal with paraffin when cold.

Jugged Hare.—Take one hare, one quarter of a pound of fat bacon, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of powdered herbs, six small green onions or one good-sized one, one tomato, or its equivalent in canned tomato, a tablespoonful of currant jelly, the juice of half a lemon, two tablespoonfuls of flour, salt to taste and one pint of stock. Cut the bacon into pieces and cut the hare into joints. Fry the bacon and fry the pieces of hare. Put hare, bacon and shallots or onion with half a tablespoonful of ham chopped, one half tablespoonful of herbs, one tablespoonful of chopped parsley, half a grated lemon rind, one teaspoonful of salt, a quarter of a teaspoonful of pepper, a dusting of cayenne, three chopped mushrooms and two eggs.
Mix all well, lay inside the hare and sew up. Place strips of fat bacon over the back of the hare and roast one and one-half hours. Fifteen minutes before taking up add the currant jelly. Take up the hare and make a sauce by thickening with flour and butter mixed together.

W. S. "Doc" Bell and wife, of West
Hickman, while going home from town Saturday night, were driving along below the West Hickman Methodist Church when a car swerved over from the right side of the street striking their buggy and throwing both Mr.
Bell and his wife out. Mrs. Bell was painfully injured, and is still confined to her bed, with a fractured collar bone, while Mr. Bell sustained a slight though painful injury on his arms. The driver of the car was unknown.

SAFETY MEETING.

A safety meeting of the employees of the Kentucky Light & Power Co., was held in the company's offices Tuesday afternoon at two o'clock, at which various problems pertaining to the safety of the employees and the public and the methods to insure safety were discussed.
A program looking to the education of the public along these lines was framed. W. A. Moore, manager of the local plant states that at the beginning of school these various problems will be discussed with the school children, teaching them methods for the prevention of injuries from contact with electricity and methods of resuscitating those who have been electrocuted. This is a very commendable move on the part of this company and one which will be appreciated by the public.
